中国工业博物馆坐落于沈阳市铁西区卫工北街14号，是在原沈阳铸造博物馆进行改造、扩建而成，其原址是沈阳铸造厂。
博物馆由通史馆、机床馆、铸造馆、铁西馆、汽车馆等几个展馆主成。
展馆展出多钟中外老式机床、上世纪30年代初的铁西规划图、新中国第一枚国徽、红旗汽车、林肯、奔驰等外国汽车。
铁西区原是沈阳工业区，经历了日本殖民工业、国民党时期工业和新中国工业等几个不同的历史时期。这里曾经有人们熟知的第一机床厂、第二机床厂、第三机床厂、矿山机械厂、鼓风机厂、水泵厂等等。
近些年，重工业厂区西迁，铁西区生态宜居环境迅速提高，2008年荣获全国唯一的联合国人居署“全球宜居城区示范奖”，2009年被评为“新中国建国60年60大地标”之一。
做为老产业工人之子，也曾经在制造业工作过的我，特别喜欢这里的，虽然有些展馆里还夹扎着浓郁的机油味，但这恰恰是工业的真实写照。
不过可惜的是，现在场馆正在改造，不少展馆没有开放。前些年跟着父母来过一次，展馆里还有一个大食堂，布局就像以前的工人大食堂，菜很便宜，当时午饭就在食堂吃的。展馆后面有一个休闲广场，停着几辆下线的无轨电车。但现在食堂已经不对外开放、休闲广场也暂不开放，二楼图书馆也暂不对外开放，非常可惜。

中国工业博物馆坐落于国家六大区域中心城市，东北第一大城市---沈阳。沈阳有着“共和国长子”和“东方鲁尔”的美誉，是中国乃至东北亚地区规模最大的工业中心城市。
中国工业博物馆（一期）位于沈阳市铁西区卫工北街与北一西路交汇处，于2012年5月18日世界博物馆日开馆。现建有机床馆、铸造馆、通史馆、铁西新区十年馆。博物馆总占地面积8万平方米，建筑面积6万平方米。
中国工业博物馆目前征集的文物来自上海、北京、内蒙古等20多个省区市及香港特别行政区，包括国家一级文物1件，国家二、三级文物10件。
2008年6月辽宁省政府公布沈阳原铸造厂翻砂车间为辽宁省第八批省级文物保护单位。

我们去的时候，沈阳在修路，博物馆在郊区的感觉，周围没有多少人烟，司机送我们过去时说很少有游客去那里，还教我们怎么搭公交车，司机很热情。博物馆很大，因为爸爸想去看一下，所以就去了。里面的机器基本没有几个能说得上名字，不过爸爸妈妈以前是工人，还是能看懂，我是一丁点都不懂的。里面有一架全是子弹壳造的坦克模型，这个我能看明白。还有一个废弃的火车头，博物馆应该是在一个大工厂的旧址上建的吧，里面有经车间改造成的展览厅。还是长见识了，知道做工人实在不容易，很辛苦。

位于铁西，地理位置稍微有点偏，有几趟公交车可以直达。无需买票，刷身份证可以进入。里面共有大概10个馆，如果细细参观得走上一天，刚好馆里有当年特色的工人大食堂，虽然不够美味，但是有很好的特殊体验。
工业博物馆是老工业基地，博物馆由旧厂房改造而来，又各种新中国工业繁盛的介绍，及世界工业发展史的介绍，当年的机床和各种设备，当年的工人村，保持了很多原汁原味的建国初期的工业发展历程纪念。
另外要提示一下，博物馆下午4点就下班，所以亲们一定早些去，否则逛不全。

位于 沈阳 铁西区的 中国 工业博物馆，是 中国 首个工业主题的博物馆，与传统的博物馆模式不同，给人以全新的视觉效果，在大型铸造车间的基础上进行改造，气势恢弘的场面让你大有身临其境之感~　满眼的机床、齿轮，纵横交错的管道，虽然已经老旧、破损，带着斑斑锈迹，但那种沧桑感依然拨动心弦，焕发着摄人心魄的魅力。

说来惭愧，这里我是来了两次才看完的。虽然叫“中国工业博物馆”，但是它并不在北京，而是在有着“共和国长子”和“东方鲁尔”美誉的沈阳——中国乃至东北亚地区规模最大的工业中心城市。中国工业博物馆在沈阳的铁西区，是在以前的铸造厂和机床厂的基础上建设起来的，展物中可是有多项“工业之最”，非常值得一看。

位于曾经是东北乃至全国工业重镇的铁西区，记述了一段铁西区工业从初创、辉煌、衰落到重振的历程。展品无论是图片还是实物都很丰富且系统，很解渴，有部分展馆就设在原生产厂房车间里，让人从建筑本身就感受到弄弄的工业气息。参观累了饿了还有工人食堂提供物美价廉的餐食。免费参观。强烈推荐！

走进中国工业博物馆，如同打开长子的老相簿，记录着过去的峥嵘岁月。
漫步其中，放佛仍能感受到昔日机器的轰鸣与工人的激情。这座特征鲜明的博物馆通过对这些工业历史载体的保存、重组和展示，让公众有机会走近陌生的工业生产，留存一份有关工业的记忆。

工业记忆，“中国工业博物馆”，这是本人唯一认真看过的博物馆，三个小时只看了六分之一，大概记得1951年天安门挂的那枚国徽是沈阳第一机床厂造的，我理解的工匠精神可能就是排除万难的坚韧和心系国家的责任。

1.位置比较偏僻。比较冷门，人很少，场馆很大，我们去那天竟然经常一个厅只有我和同桌儿俩人。。。不过可能是因为人少吧，没有开空调，二楼还在漏水，地上放了好多盆和桶接水，灯也没有开全，有些给小朋友玩的项目也没有开放。不过可以理解啦，参观人少的话还把灯啊空调啊都打开也挺浪费资源的。
2.我一个中文系表示相当无力，什么都不懂。不过对这些感兴趣的朋友，肯定觉得这里超棒。虽然我什么都不懂，看到还是会很震撼，也能学到东西。尤其是又大又高又空旷的场馆和这些泛着重色金属光泽的机械，真的有种浑身充满力量的感觉，精巧和力量，这两个词的结合真的令人称奇~看到新中国的机器制造，那些场景的复原能让人瞬间热血十足；再看新世纪中国的工业和科技发展，真的好自豪好骄傲~向这些为中国工业发展的人们致敬！~
3.这是个免费的场馆，刷身份证进，没带身份证的要登记一下。建议对工业感兴趣的话还是找个讲解吧，因为展品都没什么详细介绍，只有名称，所以像我这种完全的文科生基本上什么都不懂…不过这里挺适合拍照的哈哈，有弹壳拼成的大坦克啊等等~工业也是沈阳的一个重要关键词呀~
4.二楼有个阅览室自习室一样的小型图书馆，有很多人在安静的做题、看书。看到个认真看书的爷爷没忍住拍了一下，包括我每次在学校看到退休老教师在阅览室看书做笔记都会由衷敬佩，活到老学到老，我在他们身上看到了知识的魅力和能量~
5.在场馆的某个窗台上看到了两盆小绿植，在满是机械的场馆里多了一抹温暖~

在这工作过一段时间，沈阳作为重工业城市，曾经的光辉在这里得到另一种延续与展现。分为十个展馆，大部分是在原来工厂老厂房的基础上修建的展厅。展品都为近现代工业品，展现了建国后我国工业尤其是沈阳工业的发展脉络。对我国工业文化感兴趣的可以去看看。里面的服务设施还是可以的，卫生间的环境都不错。就是馆内空调有时候不会开放，对参观有点影响。里面的食堂在我离职时已不对外开放，附近的饭店也很少，建议带点吃的去，上午去大概看看的话一般四五个小时左右可以看得比较全面了。讲解收费，全讲完大概不到200块钱。交通的话还可以，门口有两趟公交车，自驾也有免费的停车场。另外现在去图书馆也搬到了里面，有很多杂志报纸和儿童读物在二楼中庭可以免费阅读。总的来说算是值得一去的一个接近四星评价的景点。

中国铁道博物馆位于北京市朝阳区，在铁科院环行铁道附近。

行车路线： 东四环北路路霄云桥向东，至大山子环岛向北，至大山子路口向东，
穿过铁道后在路口向左，继续直行至下一道口，不穿过、左转，直行就到了。

公交路线：坐403、813、629和小30在环行铁道下车，这里有一个铁路道口。
不管是开车还是徒步，都得在铁路道口继续往西前行，来到一个丁字路口，
这时你向左走，路会越来越窄，当你走到另一个铁路道口时，你会发现你的左边
有一条小路，路的尽头是一座很大的蓝顶白色建筑，就是博物馆的机车陈列厅了。
博物馆一共分三期工程，首期就是这个机车陈列厅，第二期是他们自己的办公楼，第三
期是各种文献和小文物的陈列厅。

博物馆每星期二至日开放，电话是010-64381317/1517。路电是41314/74。
门票20元，离休、70岁以上老人、残疾人、学生、路内职工半价。

地理位置很优越，紧挨着前门和天安门广场，上下四层，对铁路的历史和发展有很系统的展现，可以视觉体验城际快轨。正阳门东火车站是正阳门馆的前身，见证了许多历史上的重要时刻，现在依旧古朴的建筑。中国铁道博物馆，共分三个地方，这里是主馆，主要介绍了中国铁路的发展历史。老旧机车车辆摆放在酒仙桥的东郊馆，八达岭的詹天佑纪念馆则介绍了中国铁路的开创者产詹天佑的生平事迹。到上面楼层以后就好很多了，机械化的时代减少了很多人员伤亡，让大家有更多的时间来考虑交通的舒适感和人性化。就是互动的环节少了，对于喜欢火车的小朋友来说，稍微枯燥了些。最后的4D电影真心不值，就是铁路部门的宣传片，还收费20块一位，10分钟！可以使用锦绣江山一卡通和北京游览年票，免费参观！

其实铁路博物馆有三个分馆，正阳门博物馆、东郊博物馆和詹天佑博物馆。正阳门主要讲的是铁路发展史。东郊是机车展示。詹天佑纪念馆就是纪念詹天佑和那段伟大的京张铁路，在八达岭。
先说说正阳门博物馆。就在前门附近，地铁和公交好多的。门票20。还有一个动车模拟驾驶+三维电影合计20元。
先说说那两个附加的项目吧。动车模拟驾驶在博物馆三楼，每15分钟一次。人少的时候可以去驾驶员坐席模拟驾驶，人多就只能坐在观光座。整个驾驶模拟的是京津高铁。全程大概5分钟？所谓的架势就是拨一个开关，推两下驾驶柄，有火车交错鸣笛。进站之后制动。坐在后面基本什么都感受不到，人多的时候建议别去了。

三维电影在三楼，电影就是宣传片。展示了许多新建的高铁大桥和车站，一个小时一场，每场大概十分钟。这个真没什么意思。不推荐。
说说展览，主要就是铁路发展史，用展板、模型和配件展示。一层是解放前到改革开放之前，二层是开放以后的建设。三层是动车模型和一个商店。地下室是好多沙盘。全程下来需要大概一个小时就够了。

云南铁路博物馆位于昆明市北京路913号，是利用昆明火车北站的候车室建立的，2004年开馆，主要展示昆明铁路发展历史，特别是米轨铁路文物，其中法国米其林内燃动力车组是国家一级文物。这一车组属高级商务列车，1914年投入运营，轮胎是橡胶的，当时专供中法两国高级官员乘坐。
博物馆门票10元，学生证半价，教师证免费参观。妈妈带了一路的教师证终于派上用场。。。
整个铁路博物馆陈列设计精良，内容详实，深入讲解了当年法国殖民者在云南修建铁路遇到了巨大的挑战和困难，印象比较深的就是由于云南地势崎岖，要修铁路只能“逢山开路，遇水架桥”，铁路两边埋葬了无数中越劳工的尸骨，最艰难的一段人字桥，平均每一米就死掉12名劳工，简直就是用鲜血和肉体铺就而成的天路。。

云南十八怪其中有一怪是火车不通国内通国外，其实就是指的滇越铁路，是当年法国殖民者修建的越南海防到昆明的一条铁路，线路为米轨，就在不久前还有通往河内的国列，不过现在国内段除了昆明市通勤的一段线路其它的都已经不通客运了，在越南体验了河口到老街段的米轨铁路之后来到这座博物馆也有别样感受，现在昆明到河口已经有标准轨的昆河铁路了...

一早就来到云南铁路博物馆，看好时刻表（时刻表会更新），等着进站，

或骑着电动车，仰望着火车通过，而我们，从车内的窗口望去，感觉很童年，很童年。这就是我想要的米轨，
一种复古的怀旧情怀。

云南铁路博物馆是中国为数不多的铁路博物馆之一，记得在北京也有一座铁路博物馆，不过比云南的要大，云南的铁路博物馆面积不大，却让人有眼前一这亮的感觉，这里有外面见不到的装着轮胎的火车，也有全木质为主的火车，还有各种轨道火车的详细介绍，门票也不贵，但却了解到很多知识，赞一个！

小时候北京还是一个自行车大城市；今天汽车限行，买辆汽车还需要先摇号；未来无人驾驶汽车又在蓄势待发... 要了解更多汽车的发展就到北京汽车博物馆来找答案。

2007年底封顶的北京汽车博物馆，位于丰台区，是中国第一座汽车博物馆。博物馆整体外形犹如一只明亮的大“眼睛”，寓意开阔视野，面向世界。

我们是提前在大众点评团购的双人票，比原价票便宜不少。第二天进馆前在博物馆东北角火车车厢形状的售票处兑换门票，很方便。

北京汽车博物馆共五层，每一层用不同的颜色体现。博物馆一层是游客服务中心和新闻发布厅（另一边与丰台规划展馆共享）。二层至五层则比较有意思。二层是中国汽车工业经典藏品车展、一个主题餐厅和专卖店。这一层比较吸引眼球的是红色熠熠灯光下的经典汽车藏品。不仅有有中国红旗►轿车一代，还有很多当年苏联的吉姆、伏尔加轿车等车的原型。三层是汽车生活、资源环境的展示。展示了很多概念车和未来汽车预测的模型。这一层比较适合小朋友们，推荐小朋友看汽车电影

和模拟开车。看汽车电影（3D）要在放映室门口的机器扫码免费换票，每十分钟一场。四层较为专业，是关于工程技术为主的展示，展示了汽车的内部构造、生产线。还有关于F1赛车的展示。五层展示了汽车的历史和中华动力。展品从最早的马车、独轮车，中国历史上著名的指南车、记里击鼓车等，一直展示到如今的汽车（如北京公共汽车103路模型、房车）。里面还有国外的早期蒸汽车、还有甲壳虫、法拉利、福特等早年的老爷车原型...

用时近两个小时参观体验，觉得展馆设计、展品陈列和场馆环境对大人和小朋友都适合，是一个全面了解汽车发展历史的好地方！

汽车，每个男人都喜欢。街上跑着的汽车，越来越时尚，越来越漂亮，然而，随着时间光的流逝，十年前、二十年前、三十年前甚至更早的汽车可能永远留在照片里，成为历史了。别着急，想看吗？那你就到北京南四环花乡旧机动车市场对面的北京汽车博物馆来，一定会大饱眼福。汽车博物馆门票25元，馆外停车场有充足的车位。博物馆一层介绍了汽车工业的发展史，各种古典车以及古代的马车、战车，琳琅满目，熠熠生辉。二层三层展出了中外各国各个时期出产的汽车，欧美的、日本的、我国的，劳斯、卡迪、雪铁龙，老红旗。但是，给人印象深刻的还是我们经历过的，老581三轮、上海、北京212、九十年代北京满大街跑的黄面的大发、八十年代九十年代初很牛的标致505。当你蹬上13路老公共汽车，车厢里面的人物模型很精彩，售票员仿佛大声喊着：“北新桥到了，有换116的请下车”。车上人有的在透过玻璃看对面的商场，有的在低声交谈，光头的、带孩子的、一个个栩栩如生。三层还有试驾车，可以亲自试驾一下，模拟感受汽车在交通事故中是怎样的情况。当年国家领袖坐过的红旗车不可不看，别忘了带相机，车旁留个影，别白来一趟！

紧邻着西南四环，很明显。地铁9号线丰台科技园站上来往东，南四环方向走大约100米后，右手边就能看到。停车位也较充裕。
门票30/人，我们是糯米团的，45双人，能省15元。另外，3月8日母子可免费参观。
场内一共5层，2-5层可供参观。每层都有不少展车，都是很有历史意义的名车。还介绍了不少发展史和许多零件构造等，从最开始的建议指南车等到现代的汽车，很有教育意义。另外还有许多可供儿童体验的区域，另需10-30元不等。有冲撞实验、激情开车体验等，小孩们都会玩的不亦乐乎。

博物馆总共5层，建议从5楼开始参观，先从宏观上了解汽车发展史，再深入微观处了解汽车在生产、制造等方面的知识，对于参观者来说更易感知。5楼的主题是创造馆，主要介绍了汽车诞生及发展的历史，有各式的摩登汽车在这层进行展示。4楼的主题是进步馆，展览介绍了汽车在设计、生产、制造等方面的知识。3楼的主题是未来馆，随着新能源、新材料的发展，展示了未来汽车在发展上的无限可能性。2楼设有餐厅和纪念品售卖处。
详尽参观过后，对汽车这一19世纪最成功的工业产品会产生更加深入的认识。

票价是感人的¥20成人票，超值。

汽车博物馆就在南四环，对面就是怡海花园小区，10点半左右到达这里，灰色的建筑灰色的天空，只有博物馆外的大屏幕是彩色的，很喜欢那句广告词：北京汽车博物馆，不只是看车的博物馆。售票处在博物馆外的东北角，两列小火车停在那里，不知道的还以为是人文景观，走近才知道原来这里是售票处，整个博物馆分为五层，一层为办公区，二层正在施工，只剩下经典汽车藏品展区和两个专卖店和餐厅。三楼为未来馆，四楼为进步馆，五层为创造馆。

小贴士：
1、博物馆南门设有停车场，每小时5元，每到周末10点左右就没有车位了，南门外的公路两侧可以停车，传说不贴条。
2、博物馆门票30元，网上有家庭票，三人60元。
3、周末孩子比较多，建议由五层开始参观
4、现在是冬季，博物馆一层基本属于正常温度，二层以上有点热，参观的时候可以适当增减衣物。
5、喜欢摄影的朋友最好带上外置闪光灯。

话说这个汽车博物馆人还挺多，停车场都满了。还好附近路边可以停车，随便找了个地方停下了。
来这儿的话真没必要买团购的电子票，正价三十，团购二十，但是团购票换票要排半天队，现场买票到了就进。省那十块钱真心不值当的。
带孩子确实特别适合来这儿，对汽车能有从头到尾的直观认识。不过馆里光线不是很好，带孩子的话一定要看好，跑丢可就麻烦了。
汽车博物馆一共五层，其实很适合来了直接直达电梯到五层，从上往下逛是比较合理而且节省体力的方式。

二层主要是餐厅和汽车模型专卖店，专卖店就不用说了，完全是谁买谁傻逼的定价方式。
而那个餐厅说是汽车主题餐厅，但真心没看出来。在里面吃饭不便宜，所以各位要是时间富裕，就可以在附近大厦的便利店或者美食街解决午饭。
然后汽车博物馆外面不定期会有活动，随时查一下会有惊喜。上次来看到玩儿汽车特技的，只可惜就看了个尾巴。

汽车博物馆在丰台区花乡，包括在博物馆通票之中，入口有团体和散客只分，有电子券的或者有博物馆通票的到达现场先要去售票处（在楼外火车头外形）兑换票，然后经过安检扫票就可以进入了，来这里的除了汽车发烧友还有不少家长带着娃来看展览，多数是男宝，本来以为人不会很多，但是确实出乎我意料，人还真是蛮多的。博物馆一共五层，主展区在3到5层，所以最好从上至下参观。本人认为展览最为精彩的部分是各国汽车的发展史介绍以及汽车结构的介绍，并展出了一些世界著名品牌早期的汽车、发动机及仿真车模，除了参观还有一些体验区，及玩具售卖区，走累了还可以去2层用餐，还是蛮方便的。

一个以汽车为主题的博物馆，五层的建筑，其中二至五层为展览区，一层是办公区。博物馆有汽车的发展史、有汽车的未来梦想、有中国汽车的发展历程，有世界汽车的发展历史。从最早的木头车，到现在的新概念汽车。博物馆还有三四处体验区，可以买票进去体验一下。还有电影中的汽车影厅，展现的都是电影里出现过的汽车。展馆的二层有两个餐厅，一个汽车主题餐厅，一个快餐厅，中午可以在这里用餐、就是感觉有点偏
汽车博物馆在南四环的西端，坐公交车在怡海花园南门站下，坐地铁九号线在科怡路下，往东走300米上人行过街桥 ，对面就是了。门票30元。

门票成人30一人，以前停车不收费，现在停院里也开始收费了，5元一小时。经常带孩子去，共五层，二到五层为展厅。二楼有餐厅和纪念品商店，三楼有儿童可参与的游戏，有点像开车的游戏机，一般排队人较多。还有互动电影，电影里的汽车，就是电影中几个剪辑镜头，坐在座椅能动的地方看。9个人一场，大概6分钟。由于是冬天去，大楼里一二层较冷，三到五层灰常灰常热，暖气开的很足。

还行吧，发现汽车博物馆的停车场上有电动汽车的充电桩，开电动汽车的伙伴可以停车同时充充电就是不知道收费否？门票团购20左右吧，里面2层以上是展区，一层办公区安检很严，抽烟的朋友趁早把您的打火机放车里免得麻烦；参观最好从顶层往下观看，这样一路下来正好了解汽车的发展史和相关车型，累了饿了可以到二层餐饮区稍作休憩或进餐，其中还有一个汽车主题餐厅。

之前看网上宣传的不错，说是带着小朋友一起去看看。整个博物馆人应该算是少的，没有像科技博物馆那样人挤人的场面，不过基本上全是溜孩子的。博物馆一共五层，一层似乎是免费对外开放的，从二楼开始查票。所以一层到二层没有直梯，如果带着婴儿车要走两段滚梯才行。

什么玩意，看朋友发朋友圈来的，结果互动项目时间安排太短，指示不明，写着凭票排队还以为是门票，谁知道要单独购票，售票处在一个偏僻的角落，问了好几个工作人员都不知道。好不容易找到了，还被告知上午的场次卖没了，弄得孩子在排队口哇哇大哭。不会再来第二次，也不会推荐朋友来！！

五层最好，汽车历史等，心里回想着儿时绘本《越跑越快》里的内容，期望看到更多的东西。
有些展品惊艳，但整体感觉低于预期，比不上儿时的那本书给我的深刻印象和影响。
楼下几层将汽车原理，讲汽车与生活之类，互动内容本来有限，加上人多，对孩子有限制，也就没太多逛

2.1. CHINA INDUSTRIAL MUSEUM

LV.21 China Eagle star5
The China Industrial Museum is located at No. 14 Weigong North Street, Tiexi District, Shenyang City. It was transformed and expanded from the original Shenyang Foundry Museum. Its original site was the Shenyang Foundry.
The museum is composed of several exhibition halls such as General History Hall, Machine Tool Hall, Foundry Hall, Tiexi Hall and Automobile Hall.
The exhibition hall exhibited many old Chinese and foreign machine tools, Tiexi plans in the early 1930s, the first national emblem of New China, Hongqi Automobile, Lincoln, Mercedes-Benz and other foreign cars.
The Tiexi District was originally the Shenyang Industrial Zone and experienced several different historical periods such as Japanese colonial industry, the Kuomintang period industry and New China industry. There used to be the well-known First Machine Tool Plant, Second Machine Tool Plant, Third Machine Tool Plant, Mining Machinery Plant, Blower Plant, Water Pump Plant, etc.
In recent years, the heavy industrial plant has moved westward, and the ecological and livable environment in Tiexi District has rapidly improved. In 2008, it was awarded the only UN-Habitat “Global Livable City Demonstration Award” in the country. One of the "Landmarks".
As the son of an old industrial worker, I have also worked in the manufacturing industry. I especially like it. Although some pavilions still have a strong smell of engine oil, this is just a true portrayal of industry.
Unfortunately, the venue is currently being renovated and many exhibition halls are not open. I visited my parents once in the past few years. There is also a large canteen in the exhibition hall. The layout is like the previous canteen of the workers. The food is very cheap. At that time, I ate in the canteen. There is a leisure square behind the exhibition hall, where several off-line trolleybuses are parked. But now the cafeteria is not open to the public, the leisure plaza is temporarily closed, and the library on the second floor is also temporarily closed to the public, which is a pity.

The China Industrial Museum is located in Shenyang, the six largest regional central city in the country and the largest city in the Northeast. Shenyang has the reputation of "the eldest son of the Republic" and "Oriental Ruhr" and is the largest industrial center city in China and even Northeast Asia.
The China Industrial Museum (Phase I) is located at the intersection of Weigong North Street and Beiyi West Road in Tiexi District, Shenyang City. It opened on World Museum Day on May 18, 2012. The machine tool hall, foundry hall, general history hall, and ten-year hall of Tiexi New District are now built. The museum covers a total area of 80,000 square meters and a building area of 60,000 square meters.
The cultural relics currently collected by the China Industrial Museum come from more than 20 provinces, autonomous regions and municipalities in Shanghai, Beijing, Inner Mongolia and the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region, including 1 national level cultural relic and 10 national level 2 and 3 cultural relics.
In June 2008, the Liaoning Provincial Government announced that the sand turning workshop of the original foundry in Shenyang was the eighth batch of provincial cultural relics protection units in Liaoning Province.

When we went, Shenyang was building roads, and the museum was in the suburbs. There was not much people around. The driver sent us to the past and said that there were very few tourists going there and taught us how to take the bus. The driver was very enthusiastic. The museum is very big, because dad wanted to see it, so he went. There are few machines in it that can say the name, but Mom and Dad used to be workers, and they can still understand it. I don't understand it at all. There is a tank model made of bullet shells, which I can understand. There is also an abandoned locomotive. The museum should have been built on the site of a large factory with an exhibition hall transformed into a workshop. It is still a long-term experience, knowing that it is not easy to work as a worker, it is very hard.

Located in Tiexi, the location is slightly off, and there are several buses that can be reached directly. No need to buy tickets, you can enter by swiping your ID card. There are about 10 pavilions in it. If you have to take a day to visit carefully, it happens that the pavilion has the workers' cafeteria of that year. Although it is not delicious enough, it has a very special experience.
The Industrial Museum is an old industrial base. The museum is transformed from an old factory building. It also introduces the prosperity of various industries in New China and the history of world industrial development. The machine tools and various equipment at that time, and the workers' village at that time, kept many original Commemorate the industrial development process of the original period of the founding of the People's Republic of China.
In addition, it should be reminded that the museum will leave work at 4 pm, so parents must go early, otherwise they will not be able to visit.

During college and graduate studies, I studied casting. Therefore, I have a deep feeling for industry and casting. I just took advantage of the small holiday of the Dragon Boat Festival to visit the China Industrial Museum. Now the national heavy industry environment is not very good. The reform of traditional casting is imminent. Under the new form, the inherent quality of casting There are new requirements, and some environmentally friendly castings, such as 3D printing, are moving forward. As the founders of this generation, we will inject fresh blood into the future of the Republic. Cast heart, cast people, cast soul!

The China Industrial Museum in Tiexi District of Shenyang is China's first industrial-themed museum. It is different from the traditional museum model. It gives a brand new visual effect and is transformed on the basis of a large casting workshop. The magnificent scene lets you A sense of immersion~ Eye-catching machine tools, gears, criss-cross pipes, although old and damaged, with spots and rust, but the sense of vicissitudes still touches the heartstrings, radiating the charm of the soul-stirring.

Ashamed, I came here twice to finish the reading. Although it is called "China Industrial Museum", it is not in Beijing, but in Shenyang, which is known as "the eldest son of the Republic" and "Oriental Ruhr"-the largest industrial center city in China and even Northeast Asia. The China Industrial Museum in Tiexi District of Shenyang was built on the basis of the former foundry and machine tool plant. There are many "industrial bests" in the exhibits, which are well worth seeing.

Located in the Tiexi District, which was once a major industrial town in the Northeast and even the whole country, it describes a period of industry in Tiexi District from the beginning, glory, decline to revival. The exhibits are rich and systematic whether they are pictures or real objects, and they are very thirsty. Some of the exhibition halls are located in the original production workshops, making people feel the industrial atmosphere from the building itself. The tour was tired and hungry, and the workers' cafeteria provided good-quality and cheap meals. Free to visit. highly recommended!

Entering the China Industrial Museum is like opening an old photo album of the eldest son, recording the past years.
Walking through it, the Buddha can still feel the roar of the old machines and the passion of the workers. Through the preservation, reorganization and display of these industrial historical carriers, this distinctive museum gives the public the opportunity to approach unfamiliar industrial production and retain a memory of industry.

Industrial memory, "China Industrial Museum", this is the only museum I have seriously read. I only saw one sixth of it in three hours. I probably remember that the national emblem hung on Tiananmen Square in 1951 was made by Shenyang No. 1 Machine Tool Plant. The understanding of the craftsman's spirit may be to eliminate the toughness and the responsibility of the state.

1. The location is relatively remote. Relatively unpopular, there are few people, and the venue is very large. The day we went there was often a hall with only me and the same table. . . However, it may be because there are few people, no air conditioning, the second floor is still leaking, many pots and buckets are placed on the ground to receive water, the lights are not turned on, and some projects for children are not open. But understandably, if there are few visitors, turning on the lights and air conditioners is also a waste of resources.
2. I am a Chinese department who says that I am quite powerless and do not understand anything. But for those who are interested in it, it must be awesome. Although I don't understand anything, I'm still shocked to see it and learn something. Especially the large, tall and empty venues and these machines with heavy metal luster, there is really a feeling of strength, ingenuity and power. The combination of these two words is really amazing~ seeing New China Machine manufacturing, the restoration of those scenes can make people full of blood in an instant; looking at the development of China's industry and technology in the new century, I am really proud and proud~ to pay tribute to these people who have developed China's industry! ~
3. This is a free venue. You can enter it by swiping your ID card. Those who do not have an ID card should register. If you are interested in industry, let's find an explanation, because the exhibits have no detailed introduction, only the name, so the full liberal arts students like me basically don't understand anything... But here is very suitable for taking pictures. Haha, there are bullet shells. The big tank and so on~ Industry is also an important keyword in Shenyang~
4. On the second floor, there is a small library like reading room and study room. Many people are quietly doing questions and reading books. I saw a grandpa who read books seriously and couldn't help but take a picture, including every time I saw a retired old teacher reading books and reading notes in the reading room at school, I would sincerely admire it. Charm and energy~
5. I saw two pots of small green plants on a window sill of the venue, and a lot of warmth in the mechanical venue.

After working here for a period of time, Shenyang, as a heavy industry city, has another continuation and display of its former glory here. It is divided into ten exhibition halls, most of which are built on the basis of the old factory buildings. The exhibits are all modern industrial products, which show the development of China's industry, especially Shenyang, after the founding of the People's Republic of my country. Those interested in my country's industrial culture can take a look. The service facilities inside are still OK, and the bathroom environment is good. The air-conditioning in the hall is sometimes not open, which has a little impact on the visit. The cafeteria inside was closed to the public when I left office, and there were few restaurants nearby. It is recommended to take some food. If you go to visit in the morning, it is generally more comprehensive in about four or five hours. Explain the fees, after less than 200 yuan. Transportation is fine, there are two buses at the door, and there is a free parking lot for self-driving. In addition, I have moved to the library now. There are many magazines, newspapers and children's books in the atrium on the second floor, which can be read free of charge. Generally speaking, it is a place close to the four-star evaluation.

The geographical position is very superior, close to the front door and Tiananmen Square, four floors up and down, a systematic display of the history and development of the railway, and a visual experience of the intercity express rail. Zhengyangmen East Railway Station is the predecessor of Zhengyangmen Pavilion. It has witnessed many important moments in history, and it is still a primitive building. The China Railway Museum is divided into three places. This is the main museum, which mainly introduces the development history of Chinese railways. Old locomotives and rolling stock are placed in the Dongjiao Pavilion of Jiuxianqiao, and the Zhan Tianyou Memorial Hall in Badaling introduces the life and deeds of Zhan Tianyou, the pioneer of Chinese railways. After arriving on the upper floors, it will be much better. The era of mechanization has reduced a lot of casualties, allowing everyone to have more time to consider the comfort and humanity of traffic. There are fewer interactive links, which is a little boring for children who like trains. The last 4D movie is really worthless. It is the promotional film of the railway department. In fact, the Railway Museum has three branches, Zhengyangmen Museum, Dongjiao Museum and Zhan Tianyou Museum. Zhengyangmen mainly talks about the history of railway development. Dongjiao is the locomotive display. The Zhan Tianyou Memorial Hall is to commemorate Zhan Tianyou and the great Beijing-Zhangjiakou Railway, in Badaling.
Let me talk about Zhengyangmen Museum first. Near the front door, there are many subways and buses. Tickets are 20. There is also an EMU driving simulation + three-dimensional movie totaling 20 yuan.
Let me talk about the two additional items first. The motor vehicle is driven on the third floor of the museum every 15 minutes. When there are few people, you can go to the driver's seat to simulate driving, and when there are many people, you can only sit in the sightseeing seat. The entire driving simulation is the Beijing-Tianjin high-speed rail. About 5 minutes? The so-called posture is to dial a switch, push the steering handle twice, and the train sirens alternately. Brake after entering the station. Sitting in the back can hardly feel anything. I suggest not to go when there are too many people.
The 3D movie is on the third floor, and the movie is the promotional film. Many newly-built high-speed rail bridges and stations are displayed, one event an hour, and each event lasts about ten minutes. This is really meaningless. Not recommended.
Talking about the exhibition, it is mainly the history of railway development, which is displayed with exhibition boards, models and accessories. The first floor is from before liberation to reform and opening up, and the second floor is the construction after opening up. The third floor is a train model and a shop. The basement is a lot of sand tables. It takes about an hour for the whole journey.

There are few tourists passing by Tiebo, so try to get a glance. The location is very good. Find the east side of the arrow tower at Zhengyang Gate, Qianmen, and you will be there from Exit B of Qianmen Station on Metro Line 2. Tickets are 20. The 1-3 floors of the entire museum are basically laid out in the order of the development of China's railways. B1 focuses on several major high-speed railway stations in China, including the Beijing-Shanghai, Beijing-Guangzhou high-speed railway and Qinghai-Tibet railway models. A closer look will give you a preliminary understanding of the development process of China's railway from scratch, from weak to strong. In particular, it focused on the development history and basic technology introduction of China's high-speed railway, which made people sincerely admire the Chinese railway.

The Yunnan Railway Museum is located at No. 913 Beijing Road, Kunming. It was established using the waiting room of Kunming North Railway Station. It opened in 2004 and mainly displays the history of the development of Kunming Railway, especially the cultural relics of the railroad track. Among them, the French Michelin internal combustion power train is National level cultural relics. This train is a high-end commercial train that was put into operation in 1914. The tires are made of rubber. At that time, it was reserved for senior officials from China and France.
Tickets for the museum are 10 yuan, half-price for student ID and free admission for teacher ID. The teacher's card that my mother brought along finally came in handy. . .
The entire railway museum has excellent display design and detailed content. It deeply explained that the French colonists had encountered huge challenges and difficulties in building railways in Yunnan. "Water bridge", the corpses of countless Chinese and Vietnamese laborers are buried on both sides of the railway, the most difficult section of the herringbone bridge, an average of 12 workers died per meter, it is simply a road paved with blood and flesh. .

It mainly introduces the history of the Yunnan-Vietnam Railway, which is worth a visit! The museum is free. You can take a meter rail train next to it, the fare is 1 yuan or 2 yuan one way (depending on the distance), but the current meter rail train in Kunming is mainly commuting instead of tourism, so the health conditions of the train are relatively poor.

Get in the car, the broken green leather train, the window can be opened, the seat in the car is still old-fashioned leather, many people take the children to sit, from the starting station to the terminal station, about 2 hours, Look at the scenery and pedestrians along the way. When the train passes by a certain city street, the guardrail is put down, and the pedestrians may push the bicycle.
Or riding an electric car, looking up at the train passing, and we, looking through the window in the car, feel very childhood, very childhood. This is the rice track I want,

When I was young, Beijing was still a big bicycle city; today, cars are restricted, and you need to shake the number to buy a car; in the future, driverless cars are ready to go... To learn more about the development of cars, go to the Beijing Automobile Museum to find answers.
The Beijing Automobile Museum, which was topped off at the end of 2007, is located in Fengtai District and is the first automobile museum in China. The overall shape of the museum is like a bright big "eye", which means to broaden the horizon and face the world.
We bought the two-person ticket in Dianping Group in advance, which is much cheaper than the original ticket. It is very convenient to exchange tickets at the ticket office in the shape of a train carriage in the northeast corner of the museum before entering the museum the next day.
The Beijing Automobile Museum has five floors, each with a different color. The first floor of the museum is the visitor service center and press conference hall (the other side is shared with Fengtai Planning Exhibition Hall). The second to fifth floors are more interesting. The second floor is the China Automobile Industry Classic Collection Auto Show, a theme restaurant and specialty stores. What attracts the eye on this floor is the collection of classic cars under the red glittering lights. There is not only a generation of the Chinese Red Flag car, but also many prototypes of the Soviet Jim and Volga cars. The third floor is the display of car life, resources and environment. A lot of concept cars and future car prediction models are displayed. This layer is more suitable for children, who are recommended to watch car movies and simulate driving. To watch a car movie (3D), you must scan the code on the machine at the entrance of the screening room to exchange tickets for free, every ten minutes. The fourth floor is more professional, it is a display of engineering technology, showing the internal structure and production line of the car. There are also displays on F1 cars. The fifth floor shows the history of the car and the power of China. The exhibits ranged from the earliest horse-drawn carriages and wheelbarrows, the famous guide cars in Chinese history, and the Jili drum car, etc., to today's cars (such as the Beijing Bus 103 model, motorhomes). There are also early foreign steam cars, as well as early classic car prototypes such as Beetle, Ferrari, and Ford...
After nearly two hours of visiting experience, I feel that the exhibition hall design, exhibit display and venue environment are suitable for both adults and children. It is a good place to fully understand the history of automobile development!

Every man likes cars. The cars running on the street are getting more and more fashionable and beautiful. However, with the passage of time, the cars from ten years ago, twenty years ago, thirty years ago or even earlier may remain in the photos forever , Has become history. Don't worry, do you want to see it? Then you can come to the Beijing Automobile Museum opposite the Old Motor Vehicle Market in Huaxiang, South Fourth Ring Road, Beijing, and you will surely feast your eyes. Tickets for the Automobile Museum are 25 yuan, and there are plenty of parking spaces in the parking lot outside the museum. The first floor of the museum introduces the history of the development of the automobile industry. Various classical cars and ancient horse-drawn carriages and chariots are dazzling and brilliant. The second and third floors exhibited cars produced in various periods of China and foreign countries, including European, American, Japanese, Chinese, Rolls, Cady, Citroen, and old red flags. However, the most impressive thing is what we have experienced, the old 581 three rounds, Shanghai, Beijing 212, the yellow-faced big hair running on Beijing in the 1990s, and the very impressive Peugeot 505 in the 1980s and early 1990s. When you board the old bus No. 13, the character models in the carriage are very exciting, and the conductor seems to shout loudly: "Beixinqiao is here, please get off if you have a change of 116". Some of the people in the car were looking at the opposite mall through the glass, some were talking in low voices, and the bald-headed and the children with children were vivid. There is also a test drive on the third floor. You can test drive yourself to simulate and experience the situation of the car in a traffic accident. Don't miss the red-flag cars that the national leaders ridden back then. Don't forget to bring your camera and leave a picture next to the car. Don't come here for nothing!

There are 5 floors in total, 2-5 floors are available for visit. There are many cars on display on each floor, all of which are famous cars of historical significance. It also introduces a lot of development history and many parts structure, etc., from the first suggested guide car to modern cars, which is very educational. In addition, there are many areas for children to experience, and the cost ranges from 10-30 yuan. There are collision experiments, passionate driving experience, etc., children will have fun.

The museum has a total of 5 floors. It is recommended to start from the 5th floor to learn about the history of automobile development from a macro perspective, and then to understand the knowledge of automobile production and manufacturing from a micro perspective, which is more perceptible for visitors. The theme of the 5th floor is the Creation Hall, which mainly introduces the history of the birth and development of automobiles. Various modern cars are displayed on this floor. The theme of the 4th floor is the Progress Hall. The exhibition introduces the knowledge of automobile design, production and manufacturing. The theme of the third floor is the Future Pavilion. With the development of new energy and new materials, it demonstrates the infinite possibilities of future automobile development. There are restaurants and souvenir shops on the second floor.

The Automobile Museum is on the South Fourth Ring Road, opposite the Yihai Garden Community. I arrived here at about 10:30. The gray building and the gray sky. Only the large screen outside the museum is colored. I like the ad slogan: Beijing Automobile Museum, It's not just a car museum. The ticket office is at the northeast corner outside the museum. Two small trains stopped there. What I didn’t know was that it was a cultural landscape. When I approached, I realized that it was a ticket office. The entire museum is divided into five floors, the first floor is the office area, and the second The floor is under construction, leaving only the classic car collection exhibition area and two specialty stores and restaurants. The third floor is the Future Pavilion, the fourth floor is the Progress Pavilion, and the fifth floor is the Creation Pavilion.
Tips:
1. There is a parking lot at the south gate of the museum at 5 yuan per hour. There will be no parking spaces at around 10 o'clock on weekends. You can park on both sides of the road outside the south gate. It is said that there is no sticker.
2. Tickets for the museum are 30 yuan, family tickets are available online, and 60 yuan for three persons.
3. There are more children on weekends, it is recommended to start the tour from the fifth floor
4. It is winter. The first floor of the museum is basically at normal temperature, and the second floor and above are a bit hot. You can add or remove clothing when you visit.
5. Friends who like photography are best to bring an external flash.
2015-12-16 08:54:09

LV.7 Tiger Little Meow star4
By the way, this car museum is quite crowded, and the parking lot is full. Fortunately, you can park on the roadside nearby, so I just found a place to stop.
If you come here, there is really no need to buy e-tickets for group purchases. The regular price is 30 and the group purchase is 20. However, it takes a long time to queue up for group purchase and exchange tickets. It's really not worth saving those ten dollars.
Bringing children is really suitable for coming here, and can have an intuitive understanding of cars from beginning to end. However, the lighting in the museum is not very good. If you are taking a child, you must take good care of it.
The Automobile Museum has five floors. In fact, it is very suitable to come directly to the elevator to the fifth floor. It is a more reasonable and energy-saving way to go from the top to the bottom.
The second floor is mainly a restaurant and a car model specialty store. Needless to say, the specialty store is completely stupidly priced by who buys it.
The restaurant said it was a car-themed restaurant, but I didn't really see it. It’s not cheap to eat inside, so if you have time, you can settle for lunch at a convenience store or a food court in a nearby building.
Then there are irregular activities outside the automobile museum, and there will be surprises if you check it at any time. Last time I saw someone playing car stunts, it was a pity that I looked at the tail.

The Automobile Museum is located in Huaxiang, Fengtai District. It is included in the museum pass. There are groups and individual passengers at the entrance. Those with electronic coupons or museum passes must first go to the ticket office (in the shape of the locomotive outside the building) to exchange tickets. Then you can enter after the security check. In addition to car enthusiasts, many parents came here with their children to come to the exhibition. Most of them are male treasures. I thought that there would not be many people, but it did surprise me. The people are really real. Quite a lot. The museum has five floors, and the main exhibition area is on floors 3 to 5, so it's best to visit from top to bottom. I think the most exciting part of the exhibition is the introduction of the development history of automobiles and the introduction of automobile structures. It also exhibits some early cars, engines and simulation models of world-famous brands. In addition to visiting, there are some experience areas and toy sales areas. You can go to the 2nd floor to eat when you are tired, which is quite convenient.

A car-themed museum, a five-story building, of which the second to fifth floors are the exhibition area and the first floor is the office area. The museum has the history of automobile development, the future dream of automobiles, the development history of Chinese automobiles, and the development history of world automobiles. From the earliest wooden cars to the current new concept cars. There are three or four experience areas in the museum, you can buy a ticket to experience it. There is also the car theater in the movie, which shows the cars that have appeared in the movie. There are two restaurants on the second floor of the exhibition hall, one car-themed restaurant and one fast food restaurant. You can eat here at noon, but it feels a bit biased.
The Automobile Museum is at the western end of the South Fourth Ring Road. Take the bus and get off at the South Gate Station of Yihai Garden. Take the Metro Line 9 and get off at Keyi Road. Go east for 300 meters and walk on the pedestrian bridge. Tickets are 30 yuan.

Tickets are 30 adults per person. In the past, there was no charge for parking. Now it is also charged for parking at 5 yuan an hour. I often take my children there. There are five floors in total, and the second to fifth floors are exhibition halls. There are restaurants and souvenir shops on the second floor, and games for children on the third floor. It's a bit like a game machine for driving. Generally, there are more people in line. There are also interactive movies. The cars in the movies are just a few clips from the movies, and they can be watched while sitting in a movable seat. A game with 9 people, about 6 minutes. Since it is winter, the first and second floors of the building are cold, and the third to fifth floors are often gray and hot, and the heating is quite sufficient.

It's okay. I found that there are charging piles for electric cars in the parking lot of the Automobile Museum. The partners who drive the electric cars can park and charge at the same time. Don't you know the charge? The ticket group purchase is about 20. There are exhibition areas on the second floor and above. The security check in the office area on the first floor is very strict. Smokers should put your lighter in the car as soon as possible to avoid trouble; it is best to watch from the top floor to get a better understanding of the car. The history of the development and related models of the car. If you are tired and hungry, you can go to the second-floor dining area for a rest or a meal. There is also a car-themed restaurant.

Tickets are 25, Meituan buys two forty. The parking fee is 5 yuan an hour. There is nothing to see on the first floor, from the second to the fifth floor. On the second floor are some classic old cars and motorcycles. There is a children's driving experience area on the third floor, and it takes a long time to line up. In fact, it is similar to a driving game in a playground. There is also a convertible experience with 20 tickets. There is a gap with imagination. But it's good to take the kids to see.

I read the online promotion before, saying that I took the children to take a look. The entire museum should be considered very small, there is no crowded scene like the science and technology museum, but basically all of them are children. The museum has five floors. The first floor seems to be open to the public for free. Ticket checking starts on the second floor. Therefore, there is no straight ladder from the first floor to the second floor. If you bring a stroller, you have to walk two stages of escalators.

The only thing in the exhibits that attracted me was the explosive display of a car. The other exhibits were not only a few exhibited cars, but also the ancient chariot on the top floor. I feel that the whole museum is really rough. I believe that this museum is really mainly children, but the safety facilities are designed too carelessly. Like many display cards, the edges are still super sharp. I guarantee that if the children get into trouble, the museum will definitely shirk their responsibility. There is also a limited parking space and random parking is serious. It's a long way from the parking lot to the museum. Because the label is not clear, it is easy to go wrong.

title: 讓大家了解中國的鐵路歷史
原本，這並不是我們北京之行的景點。我們來拜訪這《中國鐵道博物館》的原因，就是因為擠不入天安門廣場而折返。回去前門大街時，我說了，如這博物館收費不貴就入去涼下冷氣。結果，售票的姨姨說，每天有限量的免費門票，而我們亦在免費門票派晒之前到達了售票窗口。免費啊，那就入去，探索一下中國鐵路的歷史同大世界。昔日，這是一個火車站，以前的京奉鐵路，正陽門東站。1906年 (光緒三十二年) 落成使用的車站，曾經是北京最大的火車站。此車站運作至1959年才被位於建國門的新北京站取代。此站在1959年至2005年之間曾改造過多個不同的用途，一直至到2005年7月6日才開始正式改建為博物館，而此《中國鐵道博物館》，就於 2010年10月正式對外開放。一入到博物館，就標誌著中國火車的發展，由蒸汽火車開始，到柴油機車，再到電動高鐵，代表著中國的鐵路，不斷地更新，不斷地發展。館內展示了一部仿製的古代機車，叫 "龍號機車" 。正確名稱是 "中國火箭號蒸汽機車"。一般都被認為是中國第一台自行組裝的蒸汽機車。原車早於1937年失蹤了。入口處附近展示的，有一個光緒三十一年的紀念牌，此乃紀念京漢鐵路通車典禮的紀念牌。非常之有歷史價值。館內充滿了不同時代的火車圖片及文物，好讓大家知道，中國的鐵路是怎樣開始發展的。然而，說中國鐵路的名人，不得不提 "中國鐵路之父"，詹天佑先生了。說詹天佑，就要說京張鐵路。而館內也有一個專題是重點講解這第一條由中國人自行設計建造的鐵路，而詹天佑採用人字形展線的方式縮短了八達嶺隧道的修造長度，也是中國鐵路工程學上的首例。1909年通車的京張鐵路，以當時的技術來說，是一個難度很高的工程。再者，這一段時間的主題是詹天佑逝世100周年。而在專題展覽中，就重點介紹最近的鐵路大工程，是京張城際鐵路的高鐵工程，仲有就是位於新八達嶺隧道內的八達嶺長城站，是一個離地面埋深102米的地底車站。中國鐵路工程中，除了翻山越嶺之外，過江、過河也是一個難度非常高的工程。南京同武漢的長江大橋，是中國鐵路及道路工程上的壯舉之一。其中一層的展館開始說高鐵了，南京大勝關長江大橋同武漢天興洲長江大橋，就是比較近化的鐵路跨江橋樑之最。高鐵的模擬駕駛室，也許是展館最精彩的一 part 吧，不過，當日沒有開放啊，館內遊覽的大人同小朋友都很失望。不過，最吸引的都是青藏鐵路沙盤。中國鐵路工程中，最能令中國人感自豪的，就是青藏鐵路的建造工程同通車營運。在這展館內，以簡單一目了然的沙盤，解釋了整段青藏鐵路的走線。從那佔了幾乎半層空間的青藏鐵路沙盤看得出，中國的鐵路工程師建造了一個幾乎是不可能的鐵路項目。很精彩的博物館，值得花時間去慢慢參觀。在北京的市郊，另有一個位於東五環外的《中國鐵道博物館 - 東郊館》，那兒更有機車車輛陳列廳。喜歡鐵路的朋友 (如我)，一定會覺得更精彩。下次來北京，希望有機會去拜訪。

title: Comprehensive coverage of railway history
I am a railway enthusiast, and visit lots of railway museums. As noted by others: this one is for small exhibits, and the variety was excellent. Knowing the technology, I could cope with the lack of English captions. I was particularly interested in the maps, far better than any which I have found published or online. The museum is reached easily. It is not the original station building repurposed: it is a replica, built at 90 degrees to the original. For families, there is plenty of visual interest. It is particularly useful if you are caught by bleak cold or rain. I have also been to the locomotive museum, not accessed as easily. At both, most visitors were middle-class Chinese parents guiding their young children. Related is the aviation museum: even more remote, and harder to access. The supplementary questions are rather rigid. I would certainly recommend the museum as a must-do for railway enthusiasts on a first trip (and over 3 hours), but only as an option for general tourists (and 1-3 hours). It fits an all-day transit stop neatly. There is a shop selling railways items, notably models. IIRC it is accessible from the street directly. There are other museums of locomotives scattered around the country, but this is the only one with a comprehensive collection of small items.

title: Disappointing
To be honest I was a little disappointed by this museum. It's in an ideal location, the former East Peking Railway Station, but shame they couldn't have recreated how the station might have looked back in its day with the addition of some rolling stock. This is my biggest gripe...no rolling stock. As China railway enthusiasts the story of the development of China's railways is screaming out to be told. This does it to some extent but ultimately disappoints. The best thing was the ridiculous language used about 'correct planning' and so forth in some of the captions. We liked the displays in the basement showing bridge and station models and the visual displays of the Beijing-Shanghai line as well as the journey up on to the Tibetan plateau. But the story of China's railways really deserves much better treatment.

title: Informative museum on the growth & significance of China’s railways

The museum takes us through the history, development, contribution and ever-growing importance of the China railway to the growth and prosperity of China. China is a major world leader in rail technology. The rail sector is a key component of economic development, political, social, cultural and comprehensive strategy of China. The rail system has an operating length of over 127,000 kilometres, of which 25,000 kilometres is used by the high-speed railway. Photos, pieces of equipment, and information boards take you through the history of the Chinese railway. There are many exhibits of all types of historical relics of locomotives, parts, rail line components, photos, videos, and documents. You can also experience being in the CRH-3 Bullet Train Simulator Cockpit.

There's not a lot in English here but it's worth going because there's enough. There are maps of the development of the rail network, there's a cab of a high speed train, there's an explanation of this European style building incongruously sitting at the SE corner of Tiananmen Square and in the basement there are models of the landscapes that the high speed train routes have been punched through, and of the high speed stations. if you like trains or have criss crossed China by train, it's great to spend and hour or so here. And it's not overcrowded.

It would be nice if all artefacts would have English description. Part of pictures and documents related to the history of Chinese railway are not for English-only speaking tourists.The museum consists a lot of interesting things related to the first days of Chinese railways and some from the present. I was expecting to see wagons, diesels and steam engines. It looks like it's not the place for this type of exhibition. However it's worth to be there. This is a lovely gray and white building that is kitty corner to Tian'anmen Square. It used to be a railway station in Beijing, but has been repurposed as a railway museum. It showcases a main mode of transportation across China, with emphasis on the higher speed trains. This is the original Beijing railway station, sadly no longer in use as it is a striking building just off Tian'anmen Square. It is spread over 4 floors, spacious and modern inside. There are a lot of black and white photographs but those looking to see old steam engines (there is one), carriages and wagons will be disappointed (there is a second Railway Museum in the north-east of the city for these items).Most of the items on display have an English title but everything else is in Mandarin.There is a simulation of a trip in a 350 kph high speed train (interesting - lasts about 5 minutes) and a ten minute 3D (glasses provided) film in the theatre about the State Railway. A combined ticket for the museum, simulation and theatre is Rmb 40 (appx £4.70). Not many visitors so if you want a break from the crowds in the Square, this may be an option. No facilities apart from toilets inside but there is a parade of shops (part of the station building outside) which includes a KFC, a mini-supermarket and some other food outlets.

There is significant confusion between the China Railway Museum -- locomotives warehoused on northwest outskirts of Beijing -- and the Beijing Railway Museum -- a comprehensive museum near Qianmen. This review is for the easily reached Qianmen location. The museum is well-located, well-designed, modern and interesting. It has lots of maps and models. I went with a train enthusiast, who was in heaven and had to be dragged away. No crowds. It's 100m from exit B of the Qianmen metro station on line 2. Gate fee is 20 RMB. English signage is generally limited. The exhibit rooms are dimly lit in general. The museum needs a refreshed modern look. The exhibit halls are large so you need to traverse across a wide hall to view all the pieces as there's nothing that occupies the center of the room. Also, you'll not find locomotives. It's more about the development of the rail-lines than the development of the locomotive.

the museum is conveniently located across the street from Tianamen Square. It's built in an old railway station.Have you ever wondered what happens to all those architectural models showing people what their new train station will look like when it's completed? They have plenty of them inside plexiglass cases. They also have 1/20 scale models of different locomotives and passenger trains in cases. Add in a few bridge models and some sand tables (dioramas) showing a landscape with the newly constructed train route.This gives a good idea how China is systematically linking the country with high speed rail networks. Are there negatives? The museum is dimly lighted. Some exhibits are closed. However, it's a great way to spend time without being part of a large crowd. If you like trains or technology, this can be a lot of fun.

title: Good Historical Info
I had done plenty of research on the rail museums in Beijing and really wanted to see both of them. This one being more centered towards the history of the railroad in China, the other more towards equipment. The location of the latter made it difficult to get to. The location of the Beijing Railway Museum however makes it a must see for any rail enthusiast. If you are there to visit Tienanmen Square then take the time to walk across the street to this museum. I actually learned quite a lot of history as a majority of the displays had English as well as Chinese. I was most surprised to learn how large of roll the U.S. had in the beginning of the Railroad in China. The scale models of the early U.S. locomotives in China are worth a good look. And the High Speed Rail exhibits on the upper floors are a pleasure if you are really into the details of all aspects of the railroad such as cross-sections of the high-speed railbed and so on. The large scale sized geographical models in the lower level were quite impressive as well. All in all if you are a railroad buff and history buff expect to spend about 3-4 hours here to see everything. If you're a casual observer you may get through in 90 minutes or less.

title: great museum, near to tianmem square
My son and I did not plan on visiting this museum, but were visiting Tiananmen Square and decided to take a look at the building. The building is probably the most attractive one in proximity to the square, and is located near to the Qianmen subway exit and Zhangyangmen Archery Tower. There is a 20 yuan entry fee. After the stressful encounter with the crowds at the Forbidden City and Tiananmen square, this was a great choice. We had lunch at the KFC (beside the museum) and then visited.The museum is comprised of four floors, and is a welcome cool from the heat outside. We had visited 14 cities in China in 16 days (between Central China to Northern), and most of our travel was by railway. We took 17 trains during this period. Based on our extensive railway experience over this short period, the museum was very interesting to us. The basement had models of the main railway lines, with a video backdrop which played the main stations and attractions on or near the line. As we had been on most of the lines, and this was our last day on vacation, we had fun trying to remember the various cities and station names along the lines.On the first floor, the exhibits are mainly historical and deal with the early development of the railway. it should be noted that there was a small section that detailed the effect of war on the rail service, but nothing relating to the extension of lines by the Japanese during the war, and the related effect that this had. I also expected to see the Russian influence on the railway also, but was disappointed with this too. The second floor details the modern railway system and the development from diesel, to electric to bullet train. The model trains are well done, and the display was comprehensive. There is a scale model of a bullet train available for viewing. On the third floor, the exhibits mainly dealt with the future of the railway, and most of the models were bullet trains. If you tour with children, do not miss the 3D room for 20 yuan, where a 20 minute film on the railway may be viewed. It is not a particularly good documentary, but kids love 3D glasses, and this will give you a few minutes break. This floor also includes a gift shop, where model trains can be purchased, and also an interactive children's display.We were happy to have stumbled upon this museum, and recommend it if you are leaving from Beijing and have some extra time on your hands. If you have travelled by rail in China, you will definitely appreciate this. All exhibits could be viewed in 1-2 hours, depending on your level of interest. There was also a small gift shop at the exit of the tour.

Spotted this by accident walking South from Tiananmen Square... interesting to see the history of chinese rail - on floors 1 and 2... but then it gets quite inspiring on Level 3 with the whole floor dedicated to the high-speed trains (which, if you have been on them you'll know are awesome!). Nearly missed the main attraction though, which is in the basement... three huge 'model's (and by huge, I mean 30 m long!), each of which show the trip from Beijing to another city (eg, Shanghai) and have an equally long 'fly-by' video playing over the top... incredible. Wish I'd done the high-speed rail simulator but it only shows every hour.

As other reviewers have pointed out, this city centre museum does not contain locomotives or carriages. It is in a rather grand disused station on the corner opposite Tiananmen Square, so is easy to add to the almost compulsory visit to the Square. What it does convey is the history of railways in China, from their relatively late development (and often hostility to what was seen as an extension of imperial interference) to the astonishing scope of the development of high speed lines today. There are also various models and pictures showing recent developments, as well as some interesting historical artefacts. There are some limited English translations of the display information, so try to visit it with a Chinese speaker if - like me - you can't read Chinese. There is reduced admission price for old buffers on production of one's passport. The cafe was shut when we visited, I'm not sure why.

This is the smaller rail museum in Beijing but by far the most accessible, directly opposite the southern access to Tiananmen Square it is an imposing art deco(?) style old station building right on the corner. The small entrance fee gives you access to 4 stories of (A/C cooled) Chinese railway history and exhibits. There aren't the locos (apart from the one in the photographs), which are on show at the larger museum on the outskirts, but there are models, smaller items, animations, photographs, paintings and a detailed history of the railways. Unlike many Beijing museums most of the written parts are also in English which enhances the experience for foreigners. It is sorely missing a cafe for older folk like us but the top floor does have a shop with water and snack items on sale, along with the souvenir items and memorabilia. title: Unimaginative, but can fill up an hour
First, let me say that this museum, housed in the refurbished old railway station buildings at Qianmen in the heart of Beijing city, is NOT the same place as The National Railway Museum which lies outside the north-east 5th ring road. If you want to see real full-size original locomotives go to the other place. I reviewed it some time ago and believe it’s still going strong. Here, at Qianmen, there are a couple of full-size mock-ups but it’s mostly small models, historical items of interest and technical paraphernalia, models of modern stations and topographical models of major train routes, and general history and development of the rail system – mostly lacking translation into English.This is a recently opened museum and it has been nicely laid-out over four floors but I feel it lacks an overall plan and doesn’t transport you on any kind of ‘journey’ through its exhibition spaces. Indeed, I felt compelled to ask if we could go upstairs or downstairs once inside – it just didn’t seem to flow. It certainly doesn’t warrant a ‘poor’ rating but it’s definitely at the low-end of ‘average’, in my opinion, and is another shining example of ‘poor museum-shop syndrome’ with its limited, overpriced stock. Still, the 20rmb entry fee is reasonable and the free ticket for senior citizens with appropriate ID is even better. Given its proximity to other attractions it’s not an unreasonable diversion but neither is it an essential one.

title: Worth a visit if you're an enthusiast
I visited here on the off chance, having really enjoyed a trip to the National Railway Museum in York, and also always having had an interest in trains. The museum is on four floors and charts the history of China's railways - unfortunately though there are mainly only models and specific parts of trains/related equipment, rather than any preserved trains themselves. The bullet train motion simulator was particularly disappointing. Probably the best parts were the bottom floor which shows the various lines from Beijing and gives an overview of the cities visited, and the 3D film at the end. OK for an hour or two, but probably only go if you're particularly interested in railways.

It details development of the Yunnan - Vietnam line built by the French and continues to the present day. It is housed in what was formerly the North Railway station in 2 large buildings. It is in three stories of both buildings. The museum is accessible with ramps and elevators. If you are a railway enthusiast, this is a must-see. The price is 10 RMB or less.

Even those expert on Kunming had no idea of the effect of French-controlled Vietnam on Kunming's history, opening the city up to the world as it looked to build Haiphong to Kunming trade links. Vivid displays, excellent descriptions. Very informative, well thought out displays. It doesn't take long to go through, but huge on content.

title: Excellent Railway Museum (Yunnan-Vietnam & Modern Day)This museum caught my eye whilst browsing things to do in Kunming, and I'm so pleased that I decided to check it out. The initial galleries summarise the construction of the Kunming-Haiphong railway in the early 1900's, quite a magnificent feat considering the terrain, with some fascinating exhibits and pictiures. The large hall has an interesting collection of trains and rolling stock, particularly the rubber-tyred Michelin railcar. The final galleries review the current "Belt & Road" initiative of the Chinese Govt, not only aiming to cover all of China with a high speed rail network, but providing their railway technology to other countries as well. Everything is well laid out and documented in both English and Chinese. It is also great value at RMB10, or approx $1.50. A taxi from Kunming city centre takes about 15 mins and costs RMB10. Two hours is probably about right to cover everything adequately.

The is mainly writing and pictures but there are also some trains, rooms designed like tunnels, videos, old artefacts such as sofas and a large mezzanine overlooking the trains with a mock bridge. However nothing interactive.It contains a lot of interesting information mainly about the development of the local railways but also related information such as the history, culture and politics of the area in the time periods when the railways were built. We learnt some fascinating facts that we were surprised we hadn't known before, such as about the historical involvement of France in china.Perfect rainy day activity. 10 rmb p/p. title: Schöner Querschnitt durch die allgemeine und die chinesische Automobilgeschichte
Das Museum wurde 2011 für die Zuschauer geöffnet. Seitdem wird die Sammlung laufend ergänzt und optimiert. Mittlerweile bietet das Museum einen überaus repräsentativen Querschnitt durch die allgemeine und die chinesische Automobilgeschichte. Auf drei Stockwerken werden über 90 Fahrzeuge ausgestellt – alle in erstklassigem Erhaltungszustand. Die wenigen Repliken wie der Dongfeng CA71 und der Patent-Motorwagen nummer 1 sind ausdrücklich als solche gekennzeichnet. Das kenne ich aus einigen europäischen Ausstellungen leider anders. Bemängeln könnte man höchsten die etwas unprofessionell aufgebockten Motorblöcke im dritten Stock. Dieses Display lässt allerdings keine relevante Motorkonstruktion aus. Die chinesische Automobilproduktion ab 1958 ist mit diversen Hongqis, Shanghais und Dongfengs und anderen Fahrzeugherstellern nahezu lückenlos abgebildet. Die Fahrzeuge werden schön und ohne unnötiges Pathos präsentiert auch wenn das Spalier einiger chinesischen Klassiker nicht die Ansicht von allen Seiten ermöglicht. Im Gegensatz zu vielen anderen Museen ist diese Ausstellung auch auf den Nachwuchs ausgerichtet. Neben F1-Fahrsimulatoren gibt es unzählige Attraktionen für die kleinen Besucher. Ich kenne so ziemlich jedes relevante Automobilmuseum in Europa – mein Fazit: Ein schöner Querschnitt toll inszeniert. Wer viel Zeit in Peking verbringt und vielleicht mit Familie unterwegs ist – lohnt sich. Wer noch tiefer in die Geschichte der chinesischen Autos eintauchen will, dem sei das überragende Beijing Classic Car Museum im Huariou District empfohlen – ca. eine Autostunde nördlich aus dem Pekinger Zentrum.

Wow! I feel quite privileged to be the first English reviewer of this museum. I think it's a great place to visit and surely a must for anyone with an interest in cars. If you have kids, they will also enjoy this place as there are a number of things to do suitable for all ages. The only reason I've held off giving it full marks is its location. If it were more central, I'd suggest it would be eligible for the must-sees.The problem is that it's quite a way out of town and although the subway is available, you'll probably need to make a couple of changes to get on to line 9 all the way down south to Keyilu station. This will take you the best part of an hour and there is a 10 minute walk after - south to the 4th ring road, turn left heading east, and cross the first footbridge. The building cannot really be missed and is an impressive five storey affair of which the top three floors are devoted to exhibits and the second a mix of cars, shops and a cafe. Nothing on the ground level. Start at the top and work your way down. The ticket office is outside housed in a couple of little trains - not sure how to justify that connection.Besides the history of automobile development and numerous models, replicas and real examples of motor cars and other vehicles and their components, there are also some interactive areas. These range from video arcade games for all and traffic awareness games for kids and mini-cinema simulators, which are free, to pay-extra simulators such as formula one racing and wind-tunnel rides. There are also some play areas for kids and rest areas dotted about where you can eat your packed lunch. The exhibition area also includes art and sculpture made from scrap and informative displays concerning the move toward a more environmentally friendly industry (we can hope, at least). In short, enough variety to keep everyone interested for at least a couple of hours.Overall, I was impressed by the design of the building and the use of the space, although some of the lighting was less than adequate in places. The facilities were clean and the staff were professional. There was only one exhibit covered up for maintenance or repair, unlike some other places I've been to, and I'm very pleased to report that despite the overwhelming number of signs advising that photos were not allowed absolutely no one took any notice including the staff. Who in their right mind wouldn't want to take photos? Well worth the ¥30 adult ticket fee. Shame it's not nearer to town or anything else interesting as this makes it at least a half day excursion.

title: Comprehensive coverage of railway history
I am a railway enthusiast, and visit lots of railway museums. As noted by others: this one is for small exhibits, and the variety was excellent. Knowing the technology, I could cope with the lack of English captions. I was particularly interested in the maps, far better than any which I have found published or online. The museum is reached easily. It is not the original station building repurposed: it is a replica, built at 90 degrees to the original. For families, there is plenty of visual interest. It is particularly useful if you are caught by bleak cold or rain. I have also been to the locomotive museum, not accessed as easily. At both, most visitors were middle-class Chinese parents guiding their young children. Related is the aviation museum: even more remote, and harder to access. The supplementary questions are rather rigid. I would certainly recommend the museum as a must-do for railway enthusiasts on a first trip (and over 3 hours), but only as an option for general tourists (and 1-3 hours). It fits an all-day transit stop neatly. There is a shop selling railways items, notably models. IIRC it is accessible from the street directly. There are other museums of locomotives scattered around the country, but this is the only one with a comprehensive collection of small items.

title: Disappointing
To be honest I was a little disappointed by this museum. It's in an ideal location, the former East Peking Railway Station, but shame they couldn't have recreated how the station might have looked back in its day with the addition of some rolling stock. This is my biggest gripe...no rolling stock. As China railway enthusiasts the story of the development of China's railways is screaming out to be told. This does it to some extent but ultimately disappoints. The best thing was the ridiculous language used about 'correct planning' and so forth in some of the captions. We liked the displays in the basement showing bridge and station models and the visual displays of the Beijing-Shanghai line as well as the journey up on to the Tibetan plateau. But the story of China's railways really deserves much better treatment.

title: Informative museum on the growth & significance of China’s railways
The museum takes us through the history, development, contribution and ever-growing importance of the China railway to the growth and prosperity of China. China is a major world leader in rail technology. The rail sector is a key component of economic development, political, social, cultural and comprehensive strategy of China. The rail system has an operating length of over 127,000 kilometres, of which 25,000 kilometres is used by the high-speed railway. Photos, pieces of equipment, and information boards take you through the history of the Chinese railway. There are many exhibits of all types of historical relics of locomotives, parts, rail line components, photos, videos, and documents. You can also experience being in the CRH-3 Bullet Train Simulator Cockpit.

There's not a lot in English here but it's worth going because there's enough. There are maps of the development of the rail network, there's a cab of a high-speed train, there's an explanation of this European style building incongruously sitting at the SE corner of Tiananmen Square and in the basement there are models of the landscapes that the high speed train routes have been punched through, and of the high speed stations. if you like trains or have criss crossed China by train, it's great to spend and hour or so here. It would be nice if all artefacts would have English description. Part of pictures and documents related to the history of Chinese railway are not for English-only speaking tourists. The museum consists a lot of interesting things related to the first days of Chinese railways and some from the present. I was expecting to see wagons, diesels and steam engines. It looks like it's not the place for this type of exhibition. However it's worth to be there. I liked the part related to the newest fleet - the bullet trains.

title: Worth a couple of hours
This is the original Beijing railway station, sadly no longer in use as it is a striking building just off Tian'anmen Square. It is spread over 4 floors, spacious and modern inside. There are a lot of black and white photographs but those looking to see old steam engines (there is one), carriages and wagons will be disappointed (there is a second Railway Museum in the north-east of the city for these items). Most of the items on display have an English title but everything else is in Mandarin. There is a simulation of a trip in a 350 kph high speed train (interesting - lasts about 5 minutes) and a ten-minute 3D (glasses provided) film in the theatre about the State Railway. A combined ticket for the museum, simulation and theatre is Rmb 40 (appx £4.70). Not many visitors so if you want a break from the crowds in the Square, this may be an option. No facilities apart from toilets inside but there is a parade of shops (part of the station building outside) which includes a KFC, a mini-supermarket and some other food outlets.

There is significant confusion between the China Railway Museum -- locomotives warehoused on northwest outskirts of Beijing -- and the Beijing Railway Museum -- a comprehensive museum near Qianmen. This review is for the easily reached Qianmen location. The museum is well-located, well-designed, modern and interesting. It has lots of maps and models. I went with a train enthusiast, who was in heaven and had to be dragged away. No crowds. Enough English to get the gist of things. There are two railway museums in Beijing, the Seiyomonkan and the East Suburbs. Seiyomonkan is located in Tiananmen Square, in the front of the monastery opposite the Forbidden City, right next to Monzen Subway Station. The remains of Fengkyo Railway's Beijing Station (Beijing Zhouyangmen East Station) is a museum. There is no display of actual vehicles, and there aren't many to see with only panels that are mainly based on the history of Chinese railways. You must go to the East Suburbs to see the vehicle. There is a railway model section at the exit, and you can purchase it mainly for HO gauges (both those that actually move and those that do not?). It's not a big store, but there aren't many places where you can buy a model train in China, so it may be a valuable place for maniacs.

It's 100m from exit B of the Qianmen metro station on line 2. Gate fee is 20 RMB. English signage is generally limited. The exhibit rooms are dimly lit in general. The museum needs a refreshed modern look. The exhibit halls are large so you need to traverse across a wide hall to view all the pieces as there's nothing that occupies the center of the room. Also, you'll not find locomotives. It's more about the development of the rail-lines than the development of the locomotive.

title: Fun if you like trains and technology
the museum is conveniently located across the street from Tianamen Square. It's built in an old railway station.Have you ever wondered what happens to all those architectural models showing people what their new train station will look like when it's completed? They have plenty of them inside plexiglass cases. They also have 1/20 scale models of different locomotives and passenger trains in cases. Add in a few bridge models and some sand tables (dioramas) showing a landscape with the newly constructed train route.This gives a good idea how China is systematically linking the country with high speed rail networks. Are there negatives? The museum is dimly lighted. Some exhibits are closed. However, it's a great way to spend time without being part of a large crowd. If you like trains or technology, this can be a lot of fun.

title: Good Historical Info
I had done plenty of research on the rail museums in Beijing and really wanted to see both of them. This one being more centered towards the history of the railroad in China, the other more towards equipment. The location of the latter made it difficult to get to. The location of the Beijing Railway Museum however makes it a must see for any rail enthusiast. If you are there to visit Tienanmen Square then take the time to walk across the street to this museum. I actually learned quite a lot of history as a majority of the displays had English as well as Chinese. I was most surprised to learn how large of roll the U.S. had in the beginning of the Railroad in China. The scale models of the early U.S. locomotives in China are worth a good look. And the High Speed Rail exhibits on the upper floors are a pleasure if you are really into the details of all aspects of the railroad such as cross-sections of the high-speed railbed and so on. The large scale sized geographical models in the lower level were quite impressive as well. All in all if you are a railroad buff and history buff expect to spend about 3-4 hours here to see everything. If you're a casual observer you may get through in 90 minutes or less.

My son and I did not plan on visiting this museum, but were visiting Tiananmen Square and decided to take a look at the building. The building is probably the most attractive one in proximity to the square, and is located near to the Qianmen subway exit and Zhangyangmen Archery Tower. There is a 20 yuan entry fee. After the stressful encounter with the crowds at the Forbidden City and Tiananmen square, this was a great choice. We had lunch at the KFC (beside the museum) and then visited.The museum is comprised of four floors, and is a welcome cool from the heat outside. We had visited 14 cities in China in 16 days (between Central China to Northern), and most of our travel was by railway. We took 17 trains during this period. Based on our extensive railway experience over this short period, the museum was very interesting to us. The basement had models of the main railway lines, with a video backdrop which played the main stations and attractions on or near the line. As we had been on most of the lines, and this was our last day on vacation, we had fun trying to remember the various cities and station names along the lines.On the first floor, the exhibits are mainly historical and deal with the early development of the railway. it should be noted that there was a small section that detailed the effect of war on the rail service, but nothing relating to the extension of lines by the Japanese during the war, and the related effect that this had. I also expected to see the Russian influence on the railway also, but was disappointed with this too. The second floor details the modern railway system and the development from diesel, to electric to bullet train. The model trains are well done, and the display was comprehensive. There is a scale model of a bullet train available for viewing. On the third floor, the exhibits mainly dealt with the future of the railway, and most of the models were bullet trains. If you tour with children, do not miss the 3D room for 20 yuan, where a 20 minute film on the railway may be viewed. It is not a particularly good documentary, but kids love 3D glasses, and this will give you a few minutes break. This floor also includes a gift shop, where model trains can be purchased, and also an interactive children's display.We were happy to have stumbled upon this museum, and recommend it if you are leaving from Beijing and have some extra time on your hands. If you have travelled by rail in China, you will definitely appreciate this. All exhibits could be viewed in 1-2 hours, depending on your level of interest. There was also a small gift shop at the exit of the tour.

Spotted this by accident walking South from Tiananmen Square... interesting to see the history of chinese rail - on floors 1 and 2... but then it gets quite inspiring on Level 3 with the whole floor dedicated to the high-speed trains (which, if you have been on them you'll know are awesome!). Nearly missed the main attraction though, which is in the basement... three huge 'model's (and by huge, I mean 30 m long!), each of which show the trip from Beijing to another city (eg, Shanghai) and have an equally long 'fly-by' video playing over the top... incredible. Wish I'd done the high-speed rail simulator but it only shows every hour.

title: What it does, it does well.
As other reviewers have pointed out, this city centre museum does not contain locomotives or carriages. It is in a rather grand disused station on the corner opposite Tiananmen Square, so is easy to add to the almost compulsory visit to the Square. What it does convey is the history of railways in China, from their relatively late development (and often hostility to what was seen as an extension of imperial interference) to the astonishing scope of the development of high speed lines today. There are also various models and pictures showing recent developments, as well as some interesting historical artefacts. There are some limited English translations of the display information, so try to visit it with a Chinese speaker if - like me - you can't read Chinese. There is reduced admission price for old buffers on production of one's passport. The cafe was shut when we visited, I'm not sure why.

This is the smaller rail museum in Beijing but by far the most accessible, directly opposite the southern access to Tiananmen Square it is an imposing art deco(?) style old station building right on the corner. The small entrance fee gives you access to 4 stories of (A/C cooled) Chinese railway history and exhibits. There aren't the locos (apart from the one in the photographs), which are on show at the larger museum on the outskirts, but there are models, smaller items, animations, photographs, paintings and a detailed history of the railways. Unlike many Beijing museums most of the written parts are also in English which enhances the experience for foreigners. It is sorely missing a cafe for older folk like us but the top floor does have a shop with water and snack items on sale, along with the souvenir items and memorabilia. Do not miss out the basement, where there are huge, dramatic animations of the main lines out of Beijing.

title: Small exhibits railway museum
There are two railway museums in Bejing. The locomotives are 15km north west of the city on the way to the airport. This museum houses the archives and small exhibits in the former Zhengyangmen East Railway Station in the heart of Bejing just across the road from Tiananmen Square. There are 4 floors of exhibits tracing the history of railways in China with models, photographs and smaller items with much emphasis on te high speed network. It is worth the 20 yuan entrance fee but needs to be complemented with a visit to the locomotives.

title: Happy children not necessarily parents
We visited the museum following an article and a photo of two beautiful locomotives in a guide. 4-storey museum retracing the evolution of the railway sector in China, each floor bears witness to the technical progress of the country's people. explanatory texts are in Chinese. The children have asked to go to the simulator but if yours have already taken the TGV there is nothing extraodian ... Great sadness no locomotive on display only a pale copy has the entrance to the museum Conclusion we could have contented ourselves with taking a photo In front of the building which is very beautiful. Be careful, the museum closes at 5:00 pm and the 3D cinema offers a last session at 3:30 pm and the simulator 4:00 .

I could say I am an enthusiast. So I took a lot of pictures while trying to recognize the Chinese locomotives that were "borrowed" from Europe, including my country.It is a fact that China has now an incredible infrastructure and they invested so much in developing railway transport.About a third of this museum is dedicated to high speed trains. You can even enter a simulator. It is for kids anyway, but it's trying to create the feeling of running a 350km/h.Worth visiting if you like trains!

title: Unimaginative, but can fill up an hour
First, let me say that this museum, housed in the refurbished old railway station buildings at Qianmen in the heart of Beijing city, is NOT the same place as The National Railway Museum which lies outside the north-east 5th ring road. If you want to see real full-size original locomotives go to the other place. I reviewed it some time ago and believe it’s still going strong. Here, at Qianmen, there are a couple of full-size mock-ups but it’s mostly small models, historical items of interest and technical paraphernalia, models of modern stations and topographical models of major train routes, and general history and development of the rail system – mostly lacking translation into English.This is a recently opened museum and it has been nicely laid-out over four floors but I feel it lacks an overall plan and doesn’t transport you on any kind of ‘journey’ through its exhibition spaces. Indeed, I felt compelled to ask if we could go upstairs or downstairs once inside – it just didn’t seem to flow. It certainly doesn’t warrant a ‘poor’ rating but it’s definitely at the low-end of ‘average’, in my opinion, and is another shining example of ‘poor museum-shop syndrome’ with its limited, overpriced stock. Still, the 20rmb entry fee is reasonable and the free ticket for senior citizens with appropriate ID is even better. Given its proximity to other attractions it’s not an unreasonable diversion but neither is it an essential one.

I took the 403 bus for about 50 minutes from the east of Beijing Station, got off at the last stop "Ring Railroad" and walked for about 10 minutes. The locomotives of the past are lined up in a huge garage, but that's it. I don't know when the museum first opened, but it hasn't been maintained at this time, and the diorama and a few explanatory versions are also left in a broken state. There is nothing worth visiting, spending 20 yuan to visit. Although he was enthusiastic to build it at first, the Chinese who did not think that they could not maintain and manage it after they built it should not have a high-speed railway, and thought back home. title: Worth a visit if you're an enthusiast
I visited here on the off chance, having really enjoyed a trip to the National Railway Museum in York, and also always having had an interest in trains. The museum is on four floors and charts the history of China's railways - unfortunately though there are mainly only models and specific parts of trains/related equipment, rather than any preserved trains themselves. The bullet train motion simulator was particularly disappointing. Probably the best parts were the bottom floor which shows the various lines from Beijing and gives an overview of the cities visited, and the 3D film at the end. OK for an hour or two, but probably only go if you're particularly interested in railways.

There are not only fixed items such as SL Mao Zedong and Asia observation cars, but also subway cars that have been replaced before and after the Olympics, and the National Railway DL that has left the line. Right next to it, there is a test line of the Railway Research Institute of China Railway called "Ring Railroad (loop line)", and when I visited, I was doing a test run of the latest Japanese floor number CRH380A. Closed at 16:00. @Japanese commentary/no support. There is no name recognition for taxi drivers. Although sufficient preparation is required, it is a must-see for train nerds. The Beijing Railway Museum, which opened in August 2008, is China's largest railway museum. The museum has a site area of 157,334m2, a building area of 20,500m2, and is a four-story building (three floors above ground/one underground floor), with long-term exhibits on the first and second floors, Shows the history of the Chinese Railway for more than 130 years with a large number of artifacts and photographs of history. It has 8 rails laid and about 60 rail cars are stored. It should be noted that the number of exhibited vehicles is the highest among railway museums in Asian countries, and it seems that there are plans to increase the number of exhibited vehicles to about 100 in the future.

title: Excellent Railway Museum (Yunnan-Vietnam & Modern Day). This museum caught my eye whilst browsing things to do in Kunming, and I'm so pleased that I decided to check it out. The initial galleries summarise the construction of the Kunming-Haiphong railway in the early 1900's, quite a magnificent feat considering the terrain, with some fascinating exhibits and pictures. The large hall has an interesting collection of trains and rolling stock, particularly the rubber-tyred Michelin railcar. The final galleries review the current "Belt & Road" initiative of the Chinese Govt, not only aiming to cover all of China with a high speed rail network, but providing their railway technology to other countries as well. Everything is well laid out and documented in both English and Chinese. It is also great value at RMB10, or approx $1.50. A taxi from Kunming city centre takes about 15 mins and costs RMB10. Two hours is probably about right to cover everything adequately.

title: Nice cross-section through general and Chinese automotive history
The museum was opened to the public in 2011. Since then, the collection has been continuously expanded and optimized. The museum now offers a very representative cross-section of general and Chinese automotive history. Over 90 vehicles are exhibited on three floors - all of them in first-class condition. The few replicas like the Dongfeng CA71 and the patent motor car number 1 are expressly marked as such. Unfortunately, I know that differently from some European exhibitions. One could fault the somewhat unprofessional engine blocks on the third floor. However, this display does not leave out any relevant engine design. Chinese automobile production from 1958 onwards is mapped almost completely with various Hongqis, Shanghai and Dongfengs and other vehicle manufacturers. The vehicles are presented beautifully and without unnecessary pathos, even if the trellis of some Chinese classics does not allow the view from all sides. In contrast to many other museums, this exhibition is also geared towards the next generation. In addition to F1 driving simulators, there are countless attractions for young visitors. I know pretty much every relevant automobile museum in Europe - my conclusion: A beautiful cross-section in a great way. Anyone who spends a lot of time in Beijing and is perhaps traveling with family - is worth it. If you want to delve deeper into the history of Chinese cars, we recommend the towering Beijing Classic Car Museum in the Huariou District - about an hour's drive north from central Beijing.

title: A great find!
Wow! I feel quite privileged to be the first English reviewer of this museum. I think it's a great place to visit and surely a must for anyone with an interest in cars. If you have kids, they will also enjoy this place as there are a number of things to do suitable for all ages. The only reason I've held off giving it full marks is its location. If it were more central, I'd suggest it would be eligible for the must-sees. The problem is that it's quite a way out of town and although the subway is available, you'll probably need to make a couple of changes to get on to line 9 all the way down south to Keyilu station. This will take you the best part of an hour and there is a 10 minute walk after - south to the 4th ring road, turn left heading east, and cross the first footbridge. The building cannot really be missed and is an impressive five storey affair of which the top three floors are devoted to exhibits and the second a mix of cars, shops and a cafe. Nothing on the ground level. Start at the top and work your way down. The ticket office is outside housed in a couple of little trains - not sure how to justify that connection. Besides the history of automobile development and numerous models, replicas and real examples of motor cars and other vehicles and their components, there are also some interactive areas. These range from video arcade games for all and traffic awareness games for kids and mini-cinema simulators, which are free, to pay-extra simulators such as formula one racing and wind-tunnel rides. There are also some play areas for kids and rest areas dotted about where you can eat your packed lunch. The exhibition area also includes art and sculpture made from scrap and informative displays concerning the move toward a more environmentally friendly industry (we can hope, at least). In short, enough variety to keep everyone interested for at least a couple of hours. Overall, I was impressed by the design of the building and the use of the space, although some of the lighting was less than adequate in places. The facilities were clean and the staff were professional. There was only one exhibit covered up for maintenance or repair, unlike some other places I've been to, and I'm very pleased to report that despite the overwhelming number of signs advising that photos were not allowed absolutely no one took any notice including the staff. Who in their right mind wouldn't want to take photos? Well worth the ¥30 adult ticket fee. Shame it's not nearer to town or anything else interesting as this makes it at least a half day excursion.
